retention periods for records

an Early Years Alliance mini guide

Retention periods are usually dictated by legal requirements, or in their absence, by industry norms or the needs of the business. Under General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) (EU) 2016/679 privacy notices must be issued to data subjects (individuals whose data is held) to explain why their data is being collected, for how long it will be held and how it will be protected. The table below sets out the requirements and recommendations for retention periods of different types of records and information, in relation to children and the management of the provision.

It is acceptable to scan documents and keep them electronically in order to save space, as long as the scanned versions are as legible as the original. The files should be labeled with the destroy dates and those that contain confidential information should be password protected. Where there are data protection issues owing to records containing personal data, paper records must be disposed of securely at the end of their life via confidential waste bins or cross-cut shredders.

Children's records	Retention period	Status	Authority
General children's records, including registers, medication records and accident records pertaining to children, parental permission forms for medication and activities, complaints records, and data for local authority funded children. Note: children's learning and development	Records should normally be retained for a reasonable period of time after children have left the provision. Providers need to make decisions about appropriate retention schedules. A retention period of three years, or until the next Ofsted inspection, after the child has left the setting as a minimum is recommended for most children.	Requirement	EYFS (given legal force by Childcare Act 2006) Data Protection Act 2018 and GDPR 2018.
